

FACILITATION SERVICES

Effective facilitation stops meetings being a waste of time.

By providing professional and energising facilitation, we help teams to get great results from important meetings and workshops.

We work in the UK and Europe with groups of all sizes, facilitating in situations ranging from business change and process improvement through to team development.

In our experience there is a direct relationship between the success of an event and the effort put into preparation beforehand. We pay as much attention to detail if the workshop is for 6 people or 106, following the approach below.

We will work closely with you from beginning to end, starting with clarifying the purpose of the event and the expected outcomes. Our consultants can also help you to position the workshop with your colleagues so that people know what to expect and are able to prepare properly beforehand.

No one workshop process suits every business or situation, so we will offer you choices for what we believe will work best in your situation. Our meeting processes are creative and involving to enable all those present to make effective contributions.

All our facilitators are experienced consultants in their own right (e.g. occupational psychologists, engineers, business strategists) giving you the option of using their specialist knowledge to help design the workshop and provide content input should you wish.

Our involvement doesn't have to end with the event. We are happy to continue working with you to process the workshop output and conclude any follow up actions.

The case studies on this site will give you a further insight into our offering.
